

Person centred reviews

What is a person centred review?

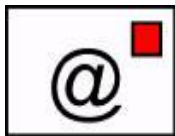

A person centred review is a review that is centred around you. This is where you are involved and you have more control. These started in 2003 as something different to a normal review.

You can invite who you want to there is also people who should be there. The meeting should take no longer than an old style review. You can choose the music and what snacks and drink are at the meeting.

It takes the same time and involves the same people. It also meets what is needed by local councils and other public bodies.

If you want more information you can contact Heather Cartledge on heather@helensandersonassociates.co.uk

Who did this and where did the pictures come from?

This has been put into easy read by Together All Are Able.

With the pictures come from the Valuing People Clipart Collection.